What do you call a system that takes the richest country the face of the earth and renders half of it's population poor? A failed system.

This is just a microcosm a much larger problem and that problem is greed, capitalism and an oligarchy with authoritarian-corporate tendencies. According to Pew, due likely to Covid more young adults under 30 are living with their parents than during the Great Depression, which has the record. About 48% of adults in this age group lived with their parents during the Depression and now it is about 52%. The increase is by almost 3 million since February of this year. That's hundreds of thousands of young people every month trying to make in the world and saying, "Hey mom and dad, you got my old room still available?". But at least corporations and the richest 1% have added trillions to their combined wealth since the pandemic and subsequent lockdowns (Bezos added 50 billion this year, likely due to say many people ordering on Amazon).

So, there you have it. As Bernie Sanders said, we have socialism for the very rich and rugged individualism for everyone else. And what is the Democrat or Republican solution? Fuck you is their solution. By the way, I happen to be one of these young adults, just in full disclosure.

PS: This is why we need to return to property as generational, meaning, you don't move out of your parents house when you come of age. Instead, whole families have large plots of land that all the relatives live on with multiple acres and that is where new families are raised. That's what I will be doing.
